What do you like most about the neighborhood:

I like the mixed historical industrial and residential feel of the neighborhood. The fact that there is still industrial activity coexisting with residences and has done so for all my time in the area with little or no friction. I feel this mix gives a very unique air not found in center city Philadelphia.

What do you think needs improvement in the neighborhood:

The area would benefit by maintaining the balance mentioned above while still developing to preserve its uniqueness and hence value over rapidly developed residential or purely industrial area. To do so, I think it is important that the membership of CNA reflect the demographics of the residents, businesses and property owners.

Tell us a little about yourself—how long have you lived in the neighborhood and why would you make a good board member:

I am an electrical engineer, I work for Arris (formerly Google and Motorola) and currently commute outside the city for work. I live in center city by choice. I have lived in Callowhill for 16 years at the same location. I've been very active in many areas over those years; initial member of the Hamilton-Ridge Garden, I currently serve on the board of the Lemon-Ridge Garden and have done so since its inception, been involved with tree tenders and planted over 100 trees in the general area and have served on the CNA board for seven years, six as secretary, and am currently my block captain.

I think I would continue to make a good board member because of my interest in the improvement of the neighborhood. I think my choice to live in an urban area shows a strong commitment to city living. I believe my unique perspective adds a different voice to the neighborhood and CNA board.
