3. Yowei Shaw's project "Really Good Elevator Music" sponsored by the Asian Arts Initiative. A 3 minute piece of music that incorporates the diverse languages of the Chinatown area." I'm looking to audio record Chinatown residence saying simple phrases in their native/learned languages which I will then edit together with street sounds to create a piece of music. The song is meant to highlight the linguistic diversity of the Chinatown community and familiarize listeners with common phrases in these many languages. This "song" will be debuted as part of the final installation of the "Really Good Elevator Music" in January. I'm currently reaching out to make contact and build relationships with different people and organizations in Chinatown that would be interested in being represented in the piece."
